Kernel model parameter identification

For $0 \leq r \leq 0.4324$, all calibration points retain the D branch with the same fitted predictions.
The selected $b = 0$ is a boundary tie preference, not evidence of zero compute cost; this is not a confidence interval.